Reagan reviews years in office

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan said last night in his final State of the Union message that the United States was "strong, prosperous, at peace," and he asked Congress to help make his last year in office "the best of eight."

The president said he has a full agenda for his final months in power: keeping the economy strong, maintaining peace, attacking social problems, particularly in education and promoting the spread of democracy worldwide.

Without specifying a figure, Reagan urged Congress to approve more aid for the Contra rebels in Nicaragua. He also called on the Senate to ratify the recently-signed agreement with the Soviet Union to abolish intermediate-range nuclear weapons.

Reversing course from last year, Reagan called for increased spending for education.

He claimed for his administration "an untold success story" — an increase in the number of young people who are willing to turn away from drugs. He praised his wife, Nancy, for that development: "She has helped so many of our young people to say 'no' to drugs. Nancy, much credit belongs to you, and I want to express to you your husband's pride and your country's thanks."

In a separate legislative message transmitted to Congress, he requested $1.5 billion — roughly a 50 percent increase — to fight the deadly AIDS virus.

The legislative message also called for a reduction of capital gains taxes, but did not cite any figures or specify any details.

Striking a bipartisan theme, Reagan told the lawmakers, "Yes, we will have our differences. But let us always remember: What unites us far outweighs whatever divides us."

Reagan chastised Congress for its often-chaotic budget process of passing budget bills after deadlines have passed and combining all federal spending in catchall legislation.

"Let's change all this," Reagan said. "Instead of a presidential budget that gets discarded and a congressional budget resolution that is not enforced, why not a simple partnership, a joint agreement that sets out the spending priorities within the available revenues."

The address sets the stage for the president's final 12 months in power after a year of heavy blows, from the revelations of the Iran-Contra affair to two failed attempts to put a hardline conservative on the Supreme Court.

Summing up his seven years in office, Reagan said the government has cut spending, tax rates and inflation, while employment has climbed to record heights.

LeMaster new Miss BGSU

by Beth Thomas
managing editor

Ami LeMaster is hoping the third time is a charm.

Crowned Miss BGSU Saturday night, LeMaster is on her way to her third Miss Ohio pageant, which will be held in June.

She has competed for the statewide title as Miss Northwest Ohio and Miss Greater Toledo, but has never been in the top 10 finalists.

The junior secondary education major said she thinks her experience at Miss Ohio will help her do better this year.

"I'm more relaxed at Miss Ohio and that'll help," she said. She also said she has improved her talent, interview skills, and all aspects of the competitions.

This was her second attempt at Miss BGSU. Her first was in 1985, and she finished as third runner-up.

"I wanted to win Miss BGSU to represent my school," LeMaster said. "It will be fun to have my school title."

The Defiance native said she knew she had done well in the pageant, but was surprised she won.

"You're always surprised because you never know what the judges are thinking," she said. "I felt really good about myself. I knew I had done the best I could in all areas of the competition. You have to go in thinking you can win, but not knowing you'll win because then you'll lose."

If she is unsuccessful at Miss Ohio this year, she said she will probably only try to win it one more time.

"If you don't win in four times, that's a hint," LeMaster said. "I figure maybe they'll get sick of seeing me and let me win."

LeMaster has wanted to be Miss Ohio since her cousin won the title in 1976, she said.

"It's been a goal that I've had for so long."

According to LeMaster, her favorite part of the competition is the talent. She sang "Golden Rainbow," from the musical "Golden Rainbow."

"I like to entertain so it is fun. The talent part of the competition is fun. It's a challenge because the judges are watching you, but it is fun to know you can entertain a crowd like that," she said.

LeMaster said preparing for the pageant takes a lot of time. She works on her singing and watches the news and reads newspapers to prepare for the interview process. She said it is important for contestants to have an opinion and be prepared to stick to it because the judges try to get them to back down.

The extensive questioning is used to determine how well a contestant would handle the media if she were Miss Ohio.

"Miss Ohio or even Miss BGSU is mostly a (public relations) job to let people know what the pageant system is about. Being able to handle the press is important," she said.

LeMaster said many girls spend a great deal of money preparing for competitions but she has been able to keep her expenses down because she gets hand-me-down gowns from another cousin who competed for the Miss Arkansas title.

Bowling Green inventor gains federal money

by Greg Connel
city editor

Although the city voided its contract with Albert Calderon last September, the federal government is continuing its support of his experimental electric generator.

The U.S. Department of Energy increased its commitment to the Bowling Green inventor's power plant Friday, awarding Calderon an almost $4 million grant to develop his process.

City Council terminated its agreement with Calderon because plans were not proceeding on schedule.

The $3,968,067 grant, which brings the total federal funding of the project to approximately $8 million, represents the beginning of the second phase in a three-phase project.

The project will develop a process developmental unit to gassify coal for the eventual production of electricity, said Congressman Delbert Latta (R-Bowling Green).

"The Calderon Technology will produce clean gas using Ohio high-sulfur coal without harming the atmosphere," Latta said. "Should the use (of this process) become widespread in the United States, we could very easily overcome serious balance of payments problems by using the hundreds of years of coal at our disposal."

Terms of the grant require the Calderon Energy Company to raise $992,216 in matching funds. Calderon said these funds will come from a combination of private contributions and state grants.

The money will be used to build a process development unit, which is a 105-foot tall, working model that incorporates the key factors of the new technology, Calderon said.

"It will be the same as a real module, only the finished plant will have several modules working together," he said.

The process development unit, which is under construction at the future site of the plant on Dunbridge Road, will be completed in about one year and the plant itself should be operational in about four years, Calderon said.

Funding for the actual plant will come from the sale of $45 million in municipal bonds approved by City Council last year, as well as from private sources and additional federal and state grants.

"These federal and state grants are for building the process development unit; we hope to get additional grants when the time comes to build the plant," Calderon said. "Everything is on the upbeat, everything is very optimistic. It's just a matter of time. We have something very novel here and it's an American development."

BG plans for safe water

by Greg Connel
city editor

Fearing the dangers of water contamination, Bowling Green will build a reservoir later this year, according to the city's director of public works.

David Barber said the reservoir will be built at the city's water treatment plant on River Road.

"We hope to have the reservoir completed sometime in 1989," Barber said. "It would be optimistic to estimate the reservoir could be in service in 1989. Realistically, it should be in service by spring, 1990."

The approximate $2.9 million facility will provide a 30-day supply of fresh drinking water in case an agricultural runoff or a spill on the Maumee River makes the water unsafe to drink, Barber said.

"We have a problem with nitrates in the water in the spring," he said. "When the nitrate level exceeds 10 milligrams per liter we are required to notify the public that the water may be unsafe for pregnant mothers or small children, so when the nitrate level reaches 10 milligrams per liter, we can take water from the reservoir and not use the Maumee River water."

The nitrates, which are contained in agricultural fertilizers, are washed into the river by rain showers, he said. In two of the past three years, they have exceeded 10 milligrams per liter for periods of one to two weeks in the spring, Barber said.

High nitrate levels in the water can result in methemoglobinemia. Commonly known as "blue babies," methemoglobinemia is a respiratory disorder which attacks the undeveloped lungs of children and inhibits their ability to pass

Latta to receive degree

by Ron Fritz
news editor

It has been said that timing is everything in the world of show business.

University President Paul Olscamp's debut as a talk show host was no exception.

Olscamp announced last night on "One on One" that the University will present Fifth District U.S. Rep. Delbert Latta, his first guest, with an honorary doctorate of public service during spring commencement.

Latta (R-Bowling Green) said last week he would not seek a 16th term, ending his 30 years in Congress on Jan. 2.

Latta

According to Olscamp, Latta's decision had nothing to do with the degree. The first show was taped Jan. 16.

"The Honorary Degrees Committee of Faculty Senate decided before he announced his retirement," Olscamp said. "We had no idea it (Latta's decision) was coming."

"I really took it for granted that we had already given him an honorary doctorate. I just discovered last year we had not."

Latta, 67, said it is a great honor to be recognized by the University, the school where both his children graduated.

"It is a high honor," Latta said. "It really means as much or more than anything I've ever received. I've always been proud to say that BGSU is in my

Suicide attempted at Offenhauer Towers

There was an attempted suicide at Offenhauer Towers last night, according to campus police.

Student witnesses said a window was broken on the south end of the 11th floor of Offenhauer West. Apparently, no further attempt was made other than the broken window.

No students were involved in the incident.

PTL head to be on WBGU-TV

A former University assistant professor of radio-television-film who is now the trustee for Heritage USA, which operates the PTL ministry, will be the guest on a special program tonight on WBGU-TV, Channel 27.

David Clark will be interviewed via satellite on "Bowling Green Forum," a weekly show hosted by Michael Marsden, associate dean of the College of Arts and Sciences. Marsden and Robert Clark, professor of radio-television-film, will ask questions and there will be a studio audience present.

Clark was appointed to replace Rev. Jerry Falwell in November by the U.S. Bankruptcy Court to save the ministry Jim Bakker created. He was on the University faculty from 1972-77, and left to become the founding dean of the School of Communications at Christian Broadcasting Network University, in Virginia Beach, Va.

AIDS unity needed

Purple sores and a fever that will not go away. That is AIDS, and the number of cases worldwide has about doubled since it was identified in 1981.

In response to the epidemic, which has 75,392 recorded victims in 130 nations as of Jan. 12, health officials from 145 countries are gathering in London today for the start of a three-day summit.

According to the World Health Organization, the event marks the largest meeting of government ministers ever held on a single health problem and deals mainly with government efforts to control the spread of Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome.

Government control of the situation could take on many forms.

The most ideal of these involves the establishment of a flow of information which knows no borders. With global unity, health officials will have access to a variety of information and ideas which could keep researchers from reinventing the wheel and instead concentrate on improving the discoveries and programs made by others.

Another type of governmental control evokes images of Big Brother as governments plan to step up mandatory testing of specific groups to protect a worried population not labeled as "at risk."

Though AIDS is still mainly a disease affecting male homosexuals and intravenous drug users in the United States and Europe, such mandatory programs have spurred complaints of discrimination and invasion of privacy.

While we open our borders to health officials of every nationality, let us not create another group of "others," those somehow singled out and assumed to be in need of mandatory testing.

Perhaps international brainstorming will result a method of protecting the global community which does not involve arbitrary labeling.

Speech never unlimited

By Yanwen Xia

These Hazelwood East High School journalists made people feel sympathetic for them because they are too young to understand and accept the Supreme Court's decision of Jan. 13, 1988, on their suit against their school's principal for his violating their freedom of speech. However, the author of the editorial article on Jan. 15, 1988 (BG News) seems to me more pathetic than these students because of the author's political naivete, historical ignorance, and failure to realize those "ifs, and or buts" are inherent in the guaranteed right to freedom of speech.

It is true that freedom of speech for every citizen is guaranteed in the First Amendment. But that guarantee has never meant unlimited scope of freedom of speech. At least we know public utterance of profanities, obscenities and other various forms of publicly offensive words and speeches are outside the scope. There has never been undefined freedom of speech.

There are numerous conditions, limitations and restrictions to our right to freedom of speech. It is by no means easy to define these limitations. Because the words in the First Amendment—"Congress shall make no law...abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press"—are rather vague. It would be much easier if the sentence started with "Under no conditions shall Congress..." As it is now, these vague words are open to various interpretations. These interpretations will have to contain a lot of "ifs, and or buts." But whatever interpretations there will be, one thing we should be clear on, and that is, who will do the job of interpretation? Who sets the limits and restrictions to our right of freedom of speech? Not you and me, ordinary people on the street, but the legislators, people high above us who are supposed to protect the interests of the ordinary people. They interpret the Constitution for us and enforce laws based on their interpretations whether or not we like these. And our activities must be within the law boundary.

These high school students seem pathetic to me, for one thing, they harbor too many illusions. They regard the Constitution as some kind of talisman without realizing the fact that the Constitution doesn't work by itself. It needs to be interpreted and ordinarily they have no power whatsoever to affect the interpretation. Therefore they have to exercise their freedom of speech within the limits defined by the legislators. They have no right to either set the limits or to overstep the limits.

For another, both these high school kids, and the above mentioned author fail to realize the fact that they are working under some kind of supervision. The supervisors have the right to impose whatever censorship they think fit.

For example, the owners of Time Magazine have every right to disapprove of any article their reporter writes if they don't like it or think the article improper for their magazine. If that reporter is unhappy about it, he is free to leave and find another magazine or publisher. But if he chooses to stay, he has to play within the rules which are set by his bosses. Every institution has its rules and its policies, and its publications have to be consistent with its own policies.

This is the same with the Hazelwood East High School. The high school journalists run their paper within the campus of an educational institution, therefore they are subject to the rules and policies set by the principal of their school. If they think the rules are unreasonable and refuse to follow, they can go and leave the school. Once they are outside the school, they are outside the scope of the school principal's censorship power.

It should be understood that the Supreme Court's decision to give the principal the right to censorship doesn't mean abridging those high school journalists' freedom of speech categorically. Nor does it mean "chipping away at one of the most important rights guaranteed in the Constitution." It only defines the already existing limits to their freedom, that is, to make it clear the rights of the school principal and those of the students in his school. The principal has no right to censor outside his realm, and the students are subject to no censorship of this kind outside his school. There is no reason to sound alarmed as some people have done over the Court's decision.

I understand these high school students are perfectly justified in their discussions about teenage pregnancies and the effects of broken families if they think these are their big problems and can talk about them in the constitutionally acceptable manners. I believe that much talk and discussion of these problems among teenagers can help prevent some of the unexpected pregnancies and help kids deal with their broken families. But, since their school principal thinks it unfit to have these talks in the school paper, they can talk about the issues outside school, say within their community so long as they really care about dealing with these problems. Neither the Court nor the principal has told them to stop such talks forever and at any place.

The case seems to highlight the necessity of a better understanding on the part of those high school journalists of a variety of rules and laws concerning freedom of speech so that they will be better equipped to go into a society of laws. It is normally believed that a person can better exercise his/her guaranteed rights and freedoms only after he/she realized the limits of their rights and freedoms. To know the rules and laws is to know the limits and to protect oneself against any damages caused by one's innocently overstepping rules and laws.

Wages, benefits not guaranteed with CWA

We, employees of BGSU, would like to express our opinion of the upcoming election of the CWA organization. We feel we have the right to express our thoughts, because the CWA lets us hear from them continuously.

We have been here enough years to know that we have been treated fairly and that we have never had any complaints as far as wages, benefits and working conditions.

In our opinion, the CWA's organizing committee should sit back and look at what they could lose. Where else can you get a job that gives you so much freedom?

As far as the University saying anything about not joining this organization, who are the ones supposedly saying this? We would like to know. No one has approached us with any ill feelings about the matter.

Is this democracy, when anti-union workers and pro-union workers are conflicting? In our opinion; no! The atmosphere on campus between classified staff involved, is very heated. Now do you feel this is fair?

In our opinion, the University or the CWA cannot guarantee our wages or benefits, if the money is not there. If the wages increase, so will tuition. Where does that put enrollment?

We praise BGSU for being one of the best institutions to work for. We feel it is well organized and working conditions are favorable. Our wages and benefits are highly acceptable compared to other places. What more could we ask for?

We finally get a staff out at P.O.M. that knows what's going on and what they're doing and people are getting scared. Look around, the campus has improved in appearance 100 percent!!

We're proud to work here and proud of the work we do. As far as dignity, we still have ours. We've earned it.

Vote on CWA, but first make sure to research To the classified employees of BGSU:

On Feb. 4, 1988 three areas of the classified staff at BGSU (food operations, custodial, and telephone operators) will decide if they want third party representation. These three groups have been designated a bargaining unit by the State Employee Relations Board. The decision for many will not be easy.

It is crucial that the employees in the bargaining unit do some fact finding before casting that vote. It is also very important to have as close to a 100 percent voter turnout as possible so that the true majority voice may be heard.

I am not in the bargaining unit and, therefore, will not be included in the election. However, if I were, I would want answers to two questions: If the union is voted in what do I stand to gain, and what do I stand to lose? Tough questions.

If third party representation is elected, my wages, vacation, sick leave, educational fee waivers, insurance plan—basically everything—is on the table for negotiation. It is doubtful but possible that something would be negotiated below the current level. If the union is not voted in, then the bargaining unit remains under the state system and the benefits can only be adjusted upward from what the state has set as the minimum.

One other important point to consider is the civil service protection. Any classified employee at BGSU currently has the right to appeal to the Board of Review. The passage of House Bill 309 in July, 1985, did not change this civil service protection as is rumored. This has been proven by a case already heard (K. Hoffman vs. University of Cincinnati). If the bargaining unit chooses to be represented by the union they lose this appeal process.

Whatever your viewpoint, just remember that the two most important things are 1) RESEARCH the pros and cons and, 2) VOTE!!

Judy Hagemann
Academic Affairs Area Budgets Office

Classified staff union could lead to strike

With the election for representation coming up by CWA (Communication Workers of America) for custodial, food service, and telecommunication, I would first like to ask, did you know the union contract takes the place of your Civil Service Contract? And your protection? And all your benefits will be put on the bargaining table, such as: paid vacations, fee waivers, sick leave, health care, pay, discount card and holiday pay.

Why do you need a union? Why bargain for something you already have? Do you think you're going to get (at the most) what you already have, the same thing I have, only I don't have to pay union dues.

You also stand to lose floating holidays. Remember four day weekends at Christmas? And what about summer hours? Do you want to work eight hours on Friday, when it's 80 degrees outside and the family is at the beach? These are things that will be bargained for.

The union says they have a million dollar strike fund that will make your house and car payment in the event of a strike. Who will pay for everything else? Utilities, taxes, insurance, phone bills, doctor bills, food or any loans you may have? The bank won't wait until the strike ends to be paid. Do you use up your savings?

I am not saying that a strike will happen, but it could, and these are things to think about. You could gain something by negotiating your benefits, but what are you willing to give up? You can't get something for nothing!

In closing I would like to say, the employees have always been a strong family group, why segregate now?

Thank you—

Boredom produces illness

by Rebecca Thomas
staff reporter

Society's worst idea is that health is the absence of illness, according to a wellness expert.

Donald Ardell, director of the Campus Wellness Center at the University of Central Florida in Orlando, spoke to about 800 people in Lenhart Grand Ballroom last night, and encouraged wellness as a way of life.

"We need a balance in America — more information about positive health and less attention focused on sickness," Ardell said. "The problem with the medical system is that they try to get us back to non-sickness. We can't settle for this."

Ardell's speech "kicked off" the Club 88 program being sponsored by the Student Recreation Center.

According to Terry Parsons, director of the Rec, the Club 88 program has been in the works for six months and is "a fun way to help people cope in making changes in weight, time management and other areas."

Wellness, according to Ardell, is more quality than longevity; many people put too much emphasis on living long instead of living well.

There are five dimensions to wellness, Ardell said, and most deal with psychological ideas rather than fitness.

The five dimensions are self-responsibility, nutrition and fitness, stress management and boredom avoidance, awareness of norms and cultures and ethics or purposes.

According to Ardell, one of the greatest threats to health is boredom.

"If you have a high degree of personal responsibility and accountability, you can change to make your life more exciting," he said.

Another important aspect of health is stress management and learning to deal with it, Ardell said.

"It's not the circumstance or event that has the greatest impact on us, but the way we respond," he said. "You have the power to learn exercises and stress management techniques."

The reason that people should be interested in wellness is three-fold, Ardell said.

"First of all, most illness is avoidable. Secondly, medical care is expensive and sometimes dangerous," Ardell said. "Most importantly, wellness is attainable and worthy — you deserve it."

When a person thinks that because they are not sick they are healthy, they are already in trouble, Ardell said.

"We need to stop putting ourselves in jeopardy. Last year alone 20 tons of aspirin were sold."

If a person puts himself in the right dimension, which is wellness, he will have a head start on a lot of important matters in his life, according to Ardell. Much of the wellness way of life deals with a person's attitude.

"Our attitudes and expectations are of more consequence than our birthday; age does not really have that much to do with it," he said.

The standard for exercise, Ardell said, is for reasons other than to avoid sickness.

"A person does this so he can feel terrific about his condition and have energy to spare," he said.

According to Dr. Joshua Kaplan, director of student health services, Ardell is the author of several wellness books and is credited with shaping and stimulating the wellness movement.

Olscamp opens door to campus

by Amy Burkett
staff reporter

If you've ever wanted to speak with President Paul Olscamp and never knew how to go about it, now is your chance — it is as easy as walking through a door.

Beginning today and continuing every Tuesday, Olscamp will be in the General Assembly Room of McFall Center from noon to 1:30 p.m. to answer any question or hear any complaint a student has to voice. There is no appointment necessary.

Phil Mason, executive assistant to the president, said the sessions are geared to clear up any misunderstanding that may exist about Olscamp.

"There has been a misperception, in my opinion, that the president has not been as accessible as some people would like," Mason said. "The fact is he attends a number of student events some of which include breakfasts, athletics, musicals and theater productions.

"In an effort to remove that perception, I would encourage students and others to attend the open door sessions," he said. "This way they can meet Olscamp and find out what he's like for themselves. He is warm, approachable and willing to talk about almost anything."

Olscamp said he tried this before at another university.

"This is not an entirely new set up," he said. "The problem with this is that there are a few people that come at first but then it dies off."

"This is a time students can ask questions and air grievances in a civilized manner and hopefully we can come up with solutions. I don't want any student to say that they couldn't meet the president if they wanted to."

According to Olscamp, he wants to put his inaccessibility to rest.

"I cannot be considered inaccessible if I provide students with the opportunity to meet with me...," he said.

Water

oxygen into the bloodstream, Barber said.

But Barber said the nitrate level must be, "a great deal higher than 10 milligrams per liter," to cause the disorder.

In addition to nitrate problems, another reason for building the reservoir is to prevent a water shortage in the case of a toxic spill like the oil spill that contaminated the Monongahela and Ohio Rivers last month, Barber said.

As the next step in the project, Toledo Testing, an area laboratory, has been contracted to analyze the soil on the 50 acres of land where the reservoir will be built.

The tests will help the city determine what equipment to use in building the reservoir and how to build the dikes that will control the flow of the water, he said.

Barber said he should receive the test results in two to three weeks. Blueprints should be finalized and the city should begin taking construction bids by April, with construction slated for later in the year.

Once the construction is completed, it will take additional time to make the reservoir operational.

Crime prevention not taken very seriously

by Rebecca Thomas
staff reporter

Crime prevention is advice more often talked about than heeded, according to Charlotte Starnes, coordinator of public safety.

Residence halls are currently involved in two programs intended to increase student awareness on this subject, she said.

Operation Identification has been in existence for about eight years. This is a process by which students engrave their social security numbers on valuables and record the number and the article on a file card which is kept on record, Starnes said.

Students are also issued a decal to put on their door which often discourages thieves from entering, she said.

Since 1983, the department of public safety and residence life have worked together in trying to implement this program, she said. Resident response, however, has been minimal.

"We offered a program on operation identification, but only about six out of 858 residents came. The turnout is very poor," Chuck Johnson, Offenbauer East hall director, said.

He attributed this to an attitude that most students have about crime in their dorm rooms.

"When something doesn't happen to students directly, it just doesn't affect them," Johnson said. "They are not concerned unless they or one of their neighbors gets something stolen."

"When something doesn't happen to students directly, it just doesn't affect them. They are not concerned unless they or one of their neighbors gets something stolen."

--Chuck Johnson, hall director

According to Rich Rocheleau, Rodgers Quadrangle hall director, few Rodgers residents are participating in the Operation Identification program.

"Very few people have taken advantage of this program. Since most of our residents are sophomores, I think they have an attitude about being above crime or theft, which they're not," Rocheleau said.

Residence hall staffs are encouraged to use the program, and many do, Johnson said.

"I know that all the resident advisers last semester used this, and I myself use it for my TV and stereo," he said.

Another program which has also existed for about eight years is Operation Hall Watch. According to Starnes, this is a program to encourage students to lock their doors when they leave their rooms, no matter how long they plan on being gone.

"Students always say things like 'I just went to take a shower.' It doesn't matter if they are going to be gone for 10 minutes or the whole day, they should still lock their doors," Starnes said.

When resident advisers find an unlocked door to an empty room, they place a "you could have been ripped off" card in the resident's room and shut the door. This promotes awareness and teaches residents to look out for one another, Starnes said.

"You can't just turn on the pumps and fill it. It would take 56 days to fill it even without providing water to the city," Barber said. "We'll need to fill it with excess water that the city isn't using."

"I don't understand why any student would do this — it is so unsafe. Even if they are waiting for their roommate who doesn't have a key to come home; that's the reason that there is such a thing as a lock-out key," she said. "Under no circumstances should anyone sleep with an unlocked door."

In an effort to curb instances of unlocked doors, campus policemen occasionally patrol the residence halls. When they find an unlocked door, they sometimes knock on the door until the resident wakes up and locks the door, said Starnes.

"When students hear about someone being awakened at 3 a.m. by a campus policeman telling them to lock their door, they start to listen," she said.

Abortion questioned

Students debate Roe vs. Wade anniversary

by Jared O. Wadley
staff reporter

Every year more than 1.5 million fetuses are killed through abortion, and some University students consider it to be a controversial issue.

Last Friday marked the 15th anniversary of the 1973 Roe vs. Wade case, which the Supreme Court legalized abortion. Before the case, abortion in Ohio was legal only to preserve a woman's life.

One University student said if the ruling was overturned, it would be a step back for women's equality.

Audra Wilson, a junior journalism major who is a member of Women for Women, said she believes in free access to birth control and the right to choice because "women have control over their bodies."

Another student, Sherry Amarel, agreed with access to birth control, but said the abortion law should be changed because an innocent baby is killed.

"Women should be responsible for their actions. Abortion is literally throwing their problem away," said Amarel, junior criminal justice major.

However, she said, abortion should only be allowed in cases of rape, incest and the endangering of a mother's life.

Roger Dunbar, junior political science major, agreed that abortion should only be permitted in "special cases" such as rape.

"I think there are exceptions to allowing abortion, but it is up to the female because it is her body," he said.

Kim Hale, senior sociology major and last year's president of Students for Life, said she does not see a change in the decision after 15 years.

"It was a bad law to begin with," she said. "A change will depend upon the new administration in the Supreme Court."

But Carol Dunn, director for the Center for Choice in Toledo, said the Roe vs. Wade decision should be expanded to include women on welfare and minors.

Friday, Dunn was greeted at the center by protesters who believe abortion should be illegal rather than expanded. In May, 1986, the center was fire-bombed by unknown persons.

Dunn said the staff rented another facility, but opened a new center May 20, 1987.

"It is time to make abortion necessary rather than accessible," Dunn said. "If we had more sex education for our young people, maybe we would not have so many abortions."

But the abortion issue is more than a social concern — it is also a religious one.

Father Herb Weber, pastor of St. Thomas More University Parish, said some people think the Catholic Church is against abortion, and will wash its hands of women involved with it.

"The Church will help them find peace of mind, and is glad to help afterward in terms of counseling," he said.

Weber also said society is discovering the "post-abortion syndrome," where people discover depression and other difficulties in their lives six to seven years later.

Lack of snowfall could melt hopes of contest

by Tim Bush
reporter

A snowfall has been forecast as likely this week and no one is more hopeful than Lisa Ribar.

Ribar, director of the University Activities Organization Games Committee, said she is "praying" for a measurable snowfall by Jan. 30, the scheduled date of the UAO Snow Sculpture Contest.

The Farmer's Almanac was consulted before the event was scheduled, according to Ribar.

"There's always snow on the ground in Bowling Green in January," she said.

The contest, providing the weather cooperates, will be held in the area between the Bell Tower and the Education Building and will last from 11 a.m. until 3 p.m., Ribar said. The location for the contest was chosen because of the heavy walking traffic it receives.

"Hopefully," she said, "people walking to class will be able to enjoy the sculptures for a while before they melt; provided, of course, that we get enough snow to build them."

Ribar said any decision to cancel or reschedule the contest due to a lack of snow will be made the morning of the contest.

"It's quite difficult to build a snow sculpture without any snow on the ground," Ribar said. "Mud sculptures just aren't what we had in mind when we planned this contest."

The UAO office telephone will be manned one hour before the scheduled start of the event to inform possible entrants of rescheduling or cancellation, according to Ribar.

When the contest is held, the Games Committee will choose two sculptures as winners in two separate categories — most creative and most true to life, Ribar said.

"Dyes, sticks, hats and props are encouraged," she said.

Acknowledging that the contest is scheduled for the day before the Super Bowl, Ribar said, "Maybe someone will build a bronco."

The group or individual responsible for the building of the most creative piece of ice art will receive a $20 pizza party, and the sculptors of the most true to life sculpture will receive 10 free passes to the UAO campus movie of their choice, she said.

The contest is open to all University students.

"We're kind of expecting groups of students to enter, but individuals are certainly welcome," Ribar said.

Miss BGSU

Her parents travel to see her whenever she is in a pageant, and she said that really helps her.

"My family is probably the biggest encouragement I have. They wear pins with my name and picture on them. They always look forward to the week in Mansfield (at the Miss Ohio pageant). Even if I didn't win a local pageant, they'd probably go without me," LeMaster said.

She has been competing in pageants since she was 14 and has won about $4,600 in scholarships, she said. The winner of Miss Ohio wins $10,000 and the Miss America winner receives $30,000. Contestants receive $2,000 just for entering Miss America, she said.

She said she has been in many pageants because "if you want something bad enough you'll keep trying." Generally, a contestant competes in two or three Miss Ohio pageants before she wins, she said.

If she wins Miss Ohio, LeMaster said she will probably take off the fall semester because that pageant is held in September.

But LeMaster said she will keep her new title in perspective. "I'm still just Ami. After a year it's all over anyway."

Winterizing can decrease auto troubles

by Amy Frankart
reporter

Getting stranded because of car trouble is distressing, especially in winter. A few simple steps, known as winterizing your car, can help alleviate some of those problems.

Bill Sockman, of Sockman Automotive, 432 Ridge St., said a tune-up of the car prior to the cold weather to be sure the car is in good condition can be a good idea. This takes care of small problems before they become major ones, and could save money in the long run.

Sockman also recommends having battery and charging circuits checked to ensure the car will start on cold mornings, especially if the car sits outside.

Anti-freeze should be checked and refilled often, he said. Belts and hoses should be inspected for leaks and cracks, and new windshield wipers should be installed.

During cold weather, rubber shrinks and causes leaks in tires, said Roger Bloomfield of Wright Tire and Auto, East Wooster Street and North Prospect Street. Because of this, air pressure in tires should be checked more frequently in winter months to prevent flats.

Other areas Bloomfield advises to check are the starter and alternator, along with the electrical systems. It is important that they are working well in the winter because the car is harder to start in cold weather.

Roger Horner, of Horner Marathon, 405 E. Wooster St., said spark plugs and caps should be in good condition for a car to run well. He also said the carburetor and choke should be clean for easier starting during the cold weather.

BG play has minority aim

Professor hopes students are attracted by production

by Jackie Jackson
copy editor

The Ethnic Cultural Arts Program will go on the road in the hope of increasing minority enrollment at the University.

By taking his production "Triangles" to the Collingwood Arts Center Theatre in Toledo, John Scott, theatre professor, said he hopes juniors and seniors from Toledo area high schools will be attracted to the University.

"We want to take our productions into communities where there are more black people," Scott said.

Students who thought about coming to the University will see that there is a program they can participate in, he added.

Scott said he wrote the play last year while on sabbatical. The play, which features University students, is an anthology of black life. It includes music, dance and poetry and focuses on relationships of trios with the intertwining themes of pain, passion and purpose.

The director of the play, Gary Bond, is a graduate student in the theatre department and a native Toledoan.

Scott said although no one asked him to take "Triangles" on the road, he believed there was a need to put a major University production where it rarely gets placed.

A field trip will be organized for students who wish to attend.

The production runs from Feb. 11 through Feb. 14. The Office of Minority Affairs is assisting in promotions.

Showtime for the production is 8 p.m. Tickets are $3 and available at the door of the Collingwood Arts Center (near Scott High School).

Blotter

Victor Glassford, 11555 Yawberb Road, Grand Rapids, was arrested Saturday at 1:32 a.m. for breaking beer bottles near Howard's Club H, 210 N. Main St. Court date is set for Feb. 1.

A complainant reported Friday at 10:10 a.m. that the rear plate to his vehicle was stolen sometime Thursday night. The vehicle was parked at his residence in the 1300 block of E. Wooster Street.

Four chrome cap covers, valued at $100, were reported stolen Friday at 2:15 p.m. from a vehicle parked in the 900 block of Champagne Ave.

A complainant reported Saturday that a rented video cassette recorder and three tapes were stolen from his home. He told police that a co-worker visited him. The complainant left the residence temporarily to get coffee, and upon his return, the VCR and tapes were missing. The complainant does not know the last name of subject, but will attempt to get the co-worker's license number.

Lisa Jo Sinatra was cited Friday at 2:15 a.m. for failing to stop for a flashing red traffic signal at the intersection of Mercer Road and E. Wooster St. The defendant told the officer she did not know she had to stop for a flashing red light.

An American flag was reported stolen from the post office, 280 S. Main St., Friday at 6:42 a.m. The flag, valued at $120, was discovered missing Thursday.

Janet Thurstin, 12225 Doran Road, Whitehouse, was arrested for shoplifting at Harts, 1094 N. Main St., Friday at 2:03 p.m. The items taken were a widget scraper, valued at $1.55, and a steel grater, valued at $1.49.

Lonnie Stansbury, 231 N. Enterprise St., was cited Friday at 4:01 p.m. for failure to pay parking tickets. The amount of the tickets is $75.

New lots expand city trailer court

by Judy Immel
assistant city editor

Parkview Trailer Court, 1048 N. Main St., will be expanding this spring with the addition of 54 trailer pads, upon which a mobile home is anchored, and plans are being made for even more pads by the end of the year.

Robert Maurer, a Bowling Green attorney and developer of the expansion, said the demand for trailer lots has increased in recent years.

"We provide a pad for the trailer and water and sewage," he said. "People chose to invest in a mobile home so they have something to show for their money at the end of three or four years. It's not like paying rent when you're left with nothing to show for all of your money."

Most people put their own trailer on an empty lot, which they rent, and sell the trailer to the next renters when they move out, Maurer said.

"The mobile homes actually appreciate in value," he said.

About 10-15 percent of the residents presently at Parkview are students at the University. Most of these are graduate students or young married couples, Maurer said.

"We've had no problems with students; they're good renters," he said.

Lee Ann Stenson, junior children services major, has lived in a trailer in another park at 525 Thurstin Ave. for one and one-half years.

"I really like it," she said. "It's bigger than most of the apartments I've seen and it's cheaper — utilities are free."

Stenson said it is both an advantage and disadvantage to live in a separate facility, unlike an apartment building.

"We're isolated a little more, so we can't meet the people across the hall or anything like that, but it's not as noisy either," she said.

The extension of the Parkview Trailer Court, which has taken two years to develop, is to be called Maple Hill. During the next year, 155 pads will be added, besides those installed this spring. Maurer estimates the total cost will be $1.5 million.

The project is a private venture for Maurer and his wife, Patricia. The Maurers are part owners of Parkview and Gypsy Lane Estates Mobile Home Park.

Municipal Administrator Wes Hoffman said the trailer park extension means more residents and thus an increased demand on city services.

"The demand on services of one sort or another — fire calls, snow removal, trash pick-up — will be increased, but the city will also gain more revenue through property taxes," he said.

AIDS bill revised

COLUMBUS (AP) — Drafters of a new law to help Ohio deal with AIDS sought to work out a snag over its insurance provisions Monday but still expected to have it ready for introduction later this week.

The office of Sen. David Hobson, R-Springfield, said questions had been raised about language requiring insurance applicants to say if they have been "confirmed positive" for acquired immune deficiency syndrome.

Hobson, who headed a task force that investigated health, economic and other problems caused by the fatal disease, was meeting with Insurance Department officials to discuss the wording.

Melanie McDonald, a Hobson aide, said he hopes to introduce the bill Tuesday, culminating a study that lasted almost a year.

The panel heard testimony about insurance, housing, employment and other problems resulting from AIDS, which destroys the body's ability to fight infections and cancers. It is transmitted through sexual contact, transfusions of blood or blood products and sharing of contaminated hypodermic needles or syringes by drug abusers.

The insurance industry, one of several represented on the task force, would be empowered by the bill to include tests for AIDS among those that can already be required for life insurance. The bill does not address insurance benefits, however, Ms. McDonald said.

Among other provisions are those that ban discrimination in housing and employment.

An employee could not be fired for having been diagnosed as having the AIDS virus, as long as he or she could perform the job. AIDS victims would be treated under the law the same as the handicapped.

The bill does not mandate AIDS tests, but seeks to encourage voluntary testing. It lets the state spend money for tracing the AIDS virus back to those believed to have spread it, but only with the consent of victims willing to identify persons with whom they had sexual relations.

Such tracing apparently would involve only one telephone call, urging the suspected carrier to agree to a test. Ms. McDonald said the bill does not permit the state "to hound someone" into getting a test.

Court halts execution

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — The U.S. Supreme Court today agreed to halt the scheduled execution of Florida death row inmate Willie Jasper Darden, whose innocence has been proclaimed by opponents to the death penalty from New York to Moscow.

The stay will remain in effect at least until the court can hear Darden's latest appeal, but there was no indication when that would happen. The action blocks any execution until further word from the court.

Darden had been scheduled to die Feb. 3 in Florida's electric chair — the sixth time his execution date had been set.

Soviet dissident Andrei Sakharov, Rep. John Conyers Jr., D-Mich., American actress Margot Kidder and British rock star Peter Gabriel have joined Amnesty International in asking Gov. Bob Martinez to grant clemency to Darden.

They cite affidavits from a minister and a woman that Darden could not have been at the scene of the murder of a Lake-land furniture store owner during a September 1973 holdup.

Death penalty opponents say Darden is facing electrocution

Feb. 3 at the Florida State Prison in Starke because he is black and victim James Turman was white.

"This is not a unique case," said Jaqui Hunt, spokeswoman for Amnesty International in New York.

"People think the death penalty is a quick fix for the crime problem. You can sympathize with people's wish to be secure, but when you see the people who are being executed you see they are the poor, the mentally retarded, juveniles and people who are possibly innocent," she said.

State seeks answers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ohio officials voiced dissatisfaction Monday with the Energy Department's explanation of why the state is not a finalist to host the world's largest atom smasher, and they vowed to continue to seek answers.

The delegation, which included members of the group that produced Ohio's proposal for the $4.4 billion Superconducting Super Collider, met with department officials for two hours behind closed doors.

Christopher Coburn, science adviser to Gov. Richard Celeste, said after the meeting that department officials would only give the group the department's interpretation of why Ohio was not among the finalists recommended by a National Academy of Sciences panel, rather than the actual evaluation of the panel.

"We will vigorously pursue the information if we have to," said Coburn. "This was not definitive. I don't think we're going to have an opportunity for an appeal. But let's at least get the record set straight."

Coburn said he will urge the state's congressional delegation to press for release of any documents that will shed light on why Ohio is not among the finalists. The state spent nearly three years and about $2.5 million to develop its propo-

Prayer doll concerns voiced

BOSTON (AP) — A new line of dolls which kneel and clasp their hands in a gesture of prayer has drawn mixed reactions from some groups that worry the saucer-eyed figures could inadvertently trivialize religion.

Kenner Parker Toys Inc. says it is marketing the cherubic, 15-inch dolls under the name Special Blessings to capitalize on a growing national interest in traditional values. The dolls will be available on store shelves next month for about $20.

"Our studies ... have shown that Americans are turning increasingly to religion and traditional values," David Mauer, president of the company's Kenner division, said in a recent telephone interview.

"When we talked to mothers, they told us they like to see toys that help a child develop faith and tradition, and Special Blessings is a vehicle to develop faith and tradition."

Store orders were brisk for the dolls, named Abigail, Angela, Christina, and Matthew Blessing, said Dick Ostrander, the company's sales manager for New England. Angela is black and the other dolls are white. The dolls clasp their palms with the help of Velcro.

"I think it might be wonderful to have a doll that portrays one of the noblest functions of human beings, not killing each other like soldier dolls, but praying," said spokesman Robert P. Dugan of the National Organization of Evangelicals, which represents 70 denominations.

Dr. Ronald Russo, executive secretary of The Religious Education Association of the United States and Canada, said, "I think the intention, if used well...in trying to advance the prayer life of a child would be advantageous. The thing I'm wary about is that things like this could be perceived as a merchandising gimmick."

17 BG goals spell Buckeyes' doom

Icers win

by Al Franco
sports reporter

Never let it be said Bowling Green's hockey team has only a few pure goal scorers.

BG's scoring sheet against Ohio State last weekend read like the roll call in a Biology 101 lecture class.

Barber, Blake, Emerson, Gribble, Meharry, Parks, Potvin, Quinn, Regan...

No less than 16 of the 19 BG players dressed tallied points as the Falcons outscored Ohio State, 17-3, in the two-game series sweep. The Falcons skated to victories Friday, 8-2 in Columbus, and Saturday, 9-1 at home.

"It was a real solid performance from our team," head coach Jerry York said. "I'm just so pleased with the way we're getting better and better in all the facets of the game."

The improvement is evident as the Falcons are now 8-1-1 in their last 10 games and now own a 16-9-2 overall record and 11-9-2 mark in the Central Collegiate Hockey Association.

BG is still in fifth place in the CCHA with 24 points, but are only one point behind fourth-place Western Michigan, and two points from third-place Michigan.

The team has amassed 30 goals in its last 10 games.

Connell jumps from Kruzich's dark shadow

by Al Franco
sports reporter

Whenever the offense has an outstanding showing, defensive play is usually overshadowed.

But one thing Saturday night's crowd of 3,473 couldn't help but notice amidst Bowling Green's 9-1 pounding of Ohio State, was the re-birth of sound goaltending in the confines of the Ice Arena.

With the graduation loss of two-time All-American Connell, sophomore goaltender Gary Kruzich, sophomore goalkeeper Paul Connell seemed to be more an object of ridicule than ovation in the first half of the season. But last weekend, Connell kicked away pucks and drew roars from the Falcons' second-largest home crowd of the season.

"Early in the season, we were making mistakes and maybe not giving him the support he should have had," head coach Jerry York said. "Now, we're giving him support and plus he's making good saves."

Connell made 14 of 15 saves

Cagers dismiss Defiance, 77-72

by Ron Fritz
news editor

Bowling Green's men's basketball team should find a good lawyer and void the contract to play Defiance College next season.

The recently-signed agreement, which has the Yellow Jackets invading Anderson Arena at a yet to be determined date next year, only means trouble for the Falcons.

BG dodged a bullet Saturday and was able to down Defiance 77-72 before a crowd of 3,284 at Anderson Arena.

Despite the loss, Yellow Jacket head coach Marv Hohenberger was pleased to announce to the media that his team would be back in BG next season.

"We'll play again next year," Hohenberger said with a smile. "Our kids seem to rise to the occasion (against BG). It's a big challenge to them."

Two seasons ago, Defiance, of the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics, was able to beat the Falcons 66-64 in overtime.

However, BG was able to wear the Yellow Jackets (14-4 overall) down Saturday.

"I think we were tired," Hohenberger said. "And I think it affected some of our shots in the last six minutes."

Down the stretch, the Falcons went from a 59-59 tie with 6:24 remaining to up by nine, 71-62, with 1:25 left to play on two free throws by freshman Billy Johnson.

But within a matter of 17 seconds, Defiance's Jim Harris scored four points to make the score 71-66 with 1:08 left.

The Yellow Jackets fouled Johnson, who missed the charity toss, only to have BG's Steve Martenet tip the rebound in for a seven-point advantage.

"That was a very big basket for BG," Hohenberger said.

Anthony Robinson and Johnson each made two foul shots in the final 26 seconds as the Falcons held on for the five-point win.

BG head coach Jim Larranaga said he was happy to get last week over—especially with a win.

"It seems like in the last week, we've played everybody when they play their best basketball," he said. "Toledo and Western were at their best. Defiance had nothing to lose. Even if they play well and lose, they can walk out of here with their heads high."

Although the final six minutes contributed heavily to BG's victory, the biggest play may have occurred with 8:00 left.

Falcon freshman Joe Moore rebounded a Johnson missed free throw, took one dribble between two Yellow Jacket defenders and put down a thundering two-handed slam dunk.

"Joe Moore made a statement with that play," Larranaga said. "He was saying, 'I'm here to win.'"

The slam propelled BG down the stretch, Larranaga said.

In the first half, the Falcons again caught a tiring Defiance team and scored the final six points of the half to take a 35-31 lead at the intermission.

Robinson moved to point guard for BG in the last four minutes of the half and caused problems for the Yellow Jackets, scoring four points and making a nice pass to Moore for a layup.

"I feel real comfortable with the freshmen (Moore and Johnson)," Robinson said. "We're starting to play well together."

Throughout the contest, the biggest thorn in BG's side was 6-foot-6 center Dennis Bostelman, who scored 35 points and grabbed nine rebounds.

"I guess I would have to say it was one of my best games," Bostelman said. "Unfortunately, my other top game was a loss also. That's what's bad about it."

The Falcons used four different defenders on Bostelman with little success.

Women play 'perfect game' in victory

by Andy Woodard
assistant sports editor

If there is such a thing as a "good" loss, then Bowling Green's women's basketball team certainly experienced one last week against Western Michigan.

The 72-70 drubbing typified how the Falcons offensive and defensive woes had reached critical condition.

Voll They needed a shot in the arm to revive, and they got it Sunday at Anderson Arena.

Playing its best game of the season, BG routed Loyola of Chicago, 91-61, as forward Jackie Motycka scored 16 points to lead six teammates in double figures.

"We just played as well as we have all year," Falcons' coach Fran Voll said of his team, now 11-4 overall. "Top to bottom, I think we shot well; I think we transitioned well; we played good on defense. I think everybody played well."

Voll made a change in the starting line-up after the WMU loss, inserting freshman Traci Gorman at guard in place of senior Chris Mossing.

Both players responded to their new roles, as Gorman scored 15 points on seven-of-10 shooting from the field, while handing out six assists. Mossing scored 13 markers on five-for-nine shooting from the field and three-of-three from the foul line.

"I like the fact that we did fine with Traci starting, and I like the fact that Chris Mossing came in and played the way she did," Voll said. "We felt we needed a little more offense and that's why we made the switch, and I think it worked out pretty good."

Loyola coach Marty Hawkins, whose team played its fourth straight road game, said his squad (8-8) lost the game when the Falcons upped a seven-point lead with two minutes remaining in the first half to a 45-34 halftime advantage.

"That hurt us - to go down 11 instead of seven or nine at the half," Hawkins said. "Then in the second half we were terrible. Bowling Green, I thought, just played the perfect game. They hardly missed a shot on offense - the only trouble they had today was deciding who was going to shoot."

Majerle, Pickell MAC's best

TOLEDO (AP) — Central Michigan's Dan Majerle and Western Michigan's Shannon Pickell have been named men's and women's basketball players of the week, respectively, in the Mid-American Conference.

Majerle, a 6-foot-6 senior forward from Traverse City, Mich., totaled 54 points and 19 rebounds as CMU won twice last week.

Pickell, a 6-1 senior from Newaygo, Mich., totaled 52 points, eight rebounds and four assists in two WMU victories last week. She had 25 points in the Broncos' 72-70 upset of Bowling Green.

by Mark Huntebrinker

A pair of sophomores stepped to the forefront of Bowling Green's men's and women's swim teams last weekend.

Rich Foster, with victories in the 100- and 200-yard freestyle events, helped the men to a second-place finish in the Mini-MAC Invitational in Ypsilanti, Mich. Eastern Michigan placed first in the two-day, three-team meet with 1,261 points. BG's 727 points finished ahead of Toledo (544).

Shari Williams paced the women with wins in the 50- and 100-freestyle events in a tough 141.5-126.5 victory over Michigan State. BG led after the first event and never looked back.

The men had an idea of what they were up against in Eastern Michigan and Toledo, whom they had already faced in dual meets this year. The Hurons, eight-time defending MAC champions, defeated BG in November, while BG beat Toledo last weekend.

Tim Wagner finished first in the 400 individual medley, defeating EMU's two-time defending MAC champion, Chris Black. Diver Mike Poindexter helped the Falcon cause with a third-place finish on the one-meter board and a fourth-place finish at three meters.

"The men's results were really no surprise," head swim coach Brian Gordon said. "Next week we go to Miami, which is easily our toughest meet of the new year." Unlike the men, the women did not know what to expect against MSU, their first severe challenge of the year. According to Gordon, they responded well.

"They showed they really wanted to win this meet," he said. "That is something we had really not seen yet."

The meet came down to the last event of the evening, the 800 free relay. The Falcons needed at least a second- and third-place finish to win the meet. BG more than answered the call by placing first and second to put away the Spartans.

Andrea Szekely turned in her best performance of the year in the 200-freestyle with a time of 1:55.04. Sheila Westendorf and Gina Jacobs each posted first-place finishes in the 1000- and 500-freestyle, respectively.

Senior diver Mary Pfeiffer topped everyone on the one-meter board.

With the victory, the women raised their overall dual meet record to 6-0.

Falcons

The Falcons were impressive on defense, too, as they limited LC, the nation's leader in three-point shooting, to only two-of-five for the contest.

Forward Mary Just, the nation's leader in three-pointers (59-for-99), made two-of-four.

In the second half, the Falcons steadily increased their lead as LC never got any closer than the 11-point half-time deficit.

BG went on an 8-0 run beginning at the 17:36 mark to up its lead to 57-40. Mossing's three-pointer at 15:50 was the big play of the spurt.

McGuire led a 3-on-2 BG advantage and fed Mossing with a bounce pass for a lay-up and a foul. The foul shot completed the play.

"We played so well as a team and just meshed it together," Voll said. "We had better passing. We didn't go up and down without an offense, which was something I thought we needed to do.

"We had several runs, while I don't think we let them get on a run, and that helped."

BG held the Ramblers to only four points from 14:00 to 6:55. The score increased from 57-45 to 77-49 in the stretch.

The Falcons shot 53.6 percent for the game, a vast improvement considering a 33 percentage in their last five games.

The Ramblers could only muster a 36.2 percentage, including 29.4 percent in the second half.

Paulette Backstrom, Angie Bonner and McGuire scored 10 points each for BG.

Just scored a game-high 18 despite sitting out much of the second half. Donna Zalig backed her with 16.

Moore playing 'big' for size

by Ron Fritz
news editor

He doesn't look very imposing. He is all of 6-foot-3 and 175 pounds.

But Saturday, Bowling Green freshman Joe Moore stood up for the rest of his teammates and told Defiance College that theirs would have to be another day.

With 8:00 remaining in the Falcons' 77-72 victory over the Yellow Jackets, Moore rebounded fellow freshman Billy Johnson's missed free throw, took one dribble and did his best Darryl Dawkins imitation with a two-handed slam dunk.

The dunk definitely had an exclamation point attached to it. You might say it was worth more than the two points allotted for a made field goal.

"That play turned the game around for us," Larranaga said. "There are always statements being made out on the court. (Dennis) Bostelman made the statement for them that 'you guys can't stop me.'"

"Joe Moore's statement with that dunk for us saying to himself, our team and coaches 'I'm here to win and I'll do whatever it takes,'" he said. "We had to have that basket."

The slam gave BG a four-point advantage which the Falcons stretched to 71-62 with 1:25 remaining.

Moore, who grabbed the rebound from the fourth position in the lane, said there was no doubt in his mind he was going to jam.

"I think dunk in the game," said Moore, whose initials happen to be J.A.M. "I just went up with it. I was very surprised they (Defiance) didn't block me out. If you slam one every now and then, that seems to pick up the team, the intensity on defense, and everything."

"My teammates kid me in practice because I'm always dunking."

He may always be dunking in practice, but Moore's biggest contribution to the Falcons is his versatility.

The Bronx, N.Y. native, despite being just 6-3, is able to rebound and score inside while also hitting an occasional jumper.

Moore led the team with nine rebounds against Defiance and leads BG with a 5.4 rebounding average this season. He also has 15 blocked shots and 15 steals.

Against the Yellow Jackets, he scored 14 points on seven-of-nine shooting from the field. He is averaging 7.6 points per game and is shooting 54 percent for the year.

He said he doesn't mind playing inside.

"Either way, it doesn't bother me," Moore said. "I practice both inside and outside. I'll play wherever Coach L wants me to play. I have confidence shooting outside, but now I'm working inside."

According to Moore, the win over Defiance is going to give the Falcons a big boost for the rest of the Mid-American Conference games.

"I think we're going to put it together now," he said. "Let's hope we can get a little stretch going here."

Icers

in the last four games with sweeps over Miami University and OSU.

Junior forward Greg Parks paced the potent offensive attack by collecting six points (three goals and three assists) on the weekend to add to his team-leading scoring total.

"We're capable of putting the puck in the net, and we've just been fortunate enough to capitalize on our chances," Parks said. "I think it comes down to hard work by everyone. The goaltending has been really strong, the defensemen have been really skating hard, and the offense has been getting the chances."

In Saturday's game, early saves by BG keeper Paul Connell seemed to get the offense going. After Connell stopped Buckeye winger Dan Wilhelm on a breakaway about 15 minutes into the opening period, the sell-out crowd and the BG offense responded.

Senior Don Barber made a nice move to get around OSU defenseman Sean Hartnell then passed to Parks who beat goalie Todd Fanning for the first goal of the contest at 16:26. Sophomore Joe Quinn scored BG's second goal with just 40 seconds left in the period as he tipped Alan Leggett's pass between Fanning's pads to close the first-period scoring.

With a 2-0 lead, the Falcons exploded in the second stanza scoring five goals, while the Buckeyes could only answer once.

Quinn and Parks each notched their second goal of the contest early in the second period at 3:06 and 3:27, respectively. Brent Regan, Nelson Emerson, and Brian Meharry also tallied in the period. Emerson and Meharry's goals were on the power play, which capitalized on two of seven chances.

Junior Andy Forcey scored the lone OSU goal of the contest with a shot between Connell's pads with 38 seconds left in the second period.

When the third period opened, both teams made goaltending changes with freshman John Burke replacing Connell, and Roger Beedon stepping in for Fanning.

Senior Andy Gribble added his 21st and 22nd goals of the season in the third period to close the scoring and give the Falcons a 9-1 victory. Gribble leads BG in goal scoring.

While in Saturday's game the Falcons exploded in the second period at home, Friday they ended the game more abruptly at Columbus.

BG tallied six unanswered goals in the first period with six different Falcons scoring.

"Certainly, the first period was for all intensive purposes the hockey game," York said. "I can't remember breaking that quick away from home in an awful long time. We just came out of the blocks so strong and so quick."

The Falcons received a "break" just 20 seconds into the contest as Barber's pass to Parks hit an OSU defenseman's skate and trickled by Fanning.

After Emerson and Quinn each tallied, OSU coach Jerry Welsh pulled Fanning for Beedon at 3:03 of the opening period. Fanning was credited with two saves.

The Falcons expanded their first period lead to 6-0 as Marc Potvin, Gribble and Rob Blake added goals.

Emerson scored the only goal of the second period at 12:31 to give BG a 7-0 lead as he tipped in Meharry's shot from the right point on the power play. The power play connected on three of 10 chances in the contest.

As was the case in Saturday's contest, York changed goaltenders at the start of the third period.

"It was good for us to get John Burke in the goal," York said. "He needs the experience and he stepped in there and did a credible job for us. Before tonight, Paul (Connell) had played 14 of the last 15 games for us."

Burke made 10 saves in the final period, when OSU seemed to mount its most pressure in a quest to break the BG shutout bid.

The Buckeyes did break the shutout at 5:42 of the third period when center Dan Oliver scored on a breakaway. OSU added its second goal as Wilhelm scored on the power play at 11:23, before Parks closed the scoring at 14:05 for a 8-2 victory.

Gymnasts defeat BSU

by Don Hensley
sports reporter

Bowling Green's gymnasts shot down Ball State, Saturday, but in the process may have shot themselves in the foot.

Although the Falcons defeated the Cardinals by a score of 169.5-166.75, they lost the battle to the judges.

In collegiate gymnastics, post-season invitations are handed out to teams possessing the best scores throughout the season. In essence, a team competes for good scores from the judges more than they do against the opponent. The win-loss record doesn't hold any weight since all teams make the Mid-American Conference tournament, regardless.

Although BG looked as though they performed well, they couldn't break the tight scoring by judges Lucille Weber and Malia Miller. "As a team and as individuals, we really improved on our routines," Coach Charles Simpson said. "I am, however, disappointed in the judges' scoring, afterall that is what gets us to the post-season tournament."

Aside from the scoring, the Falcons still had outstanding performances from veterans Lisa Hillman and Kim Trost. Freshmen Meg Griffin and Kim Crawford also aided the cause.

Hillman finished first in the all-around total with a 34.4. She finished first on the uneven bars, scoring an 8.6 to outdistance the field.

Trost notched a 34.2 in the all-around, while winning two individual events. Her performance on both the balance beam and vault earned first place, and her 9.05 on the beam was the highest score awarded in any of the four events.

On the floor exercise, Griffin (9.0) and Crawford (8.85) scored well.

The Falcons won all four events, with their widest margin of victory coming on the balance beam.

The girls will once again be tested this weekend when they travel to East Lansing, Mich. to compete in the Michigan State Invitational against the Spartans and Ball State once again.

Connell

In two periods of action Saturday. That isn't an unbelievable statistic, but the type of saves he made were.

Connell stopped Dan Wilhelm on a breakaway at 14:21 of the first period with the score deadlocked at zero. Three minutes later, he robbed Stacey Hartnell from in close with BG leading, 1-0.

The Falcons second-leading point-getter, Greg Parks, said saves like these get the momentum swaying toward the Falcons.

"The goaltender can make or break a game early on," Parks said. "He's just been playing tremendous. Whenever he kicks out a couple of saves early on, it gives the team a big lift."

Leading scorer Nelson Emerson said Connell's performance has improved in the entire second half of the season and the Falcons' have mirrored his play. Since Christmas, the Falcons are 6-1-1 and 4-1-1 in the Central Collegiate Hockey Association.

"You have to give him a lot of credit because he's come along in the second half to become an outstanding goaltender, and that just helps our team from bottom up," Emerson said.

In Friday's 3-2 victory, Connell shut out the Buckeyes for two periods before relinquishing his chores to freshman John Burke, who has also been playing with more confidence. Connell yielded only one goal in two periods, Saturday, while Burke shut out OSU in the final stanza.

"I do my best for them (the team), and they do their best for me," Connell said. "These past two games are probably the most fun I've had in my life."

In the process of stopping pucks, Connell has also halted the stigma placed upon him in the shadow of Kruzich. And as a result, the team has responded and gained national recognition with a 14th-ranking in the NCAA College Hockey Poll released yesterday.

Men Win

"He (Bostelman) was the best player on the floor (today)," Hohenberger said. "He was head-and-shoulders above anyone else out there."

No argument from the Falcons.

"He carries his team well," Robinson said. "We tried everything to stop him."

BG was led by Robinson's 19 points, including nine-for-nine from the foul line. Johnson added 15 points, Moore had 14 and Martenet scored 10.

The Falcons, 6-10 overall, host Ohio University tomorrow at 8 p.m.

PLACEMENT SCHEDULE

BOWLING GREEN STATE UNIVERSITY
UNIVERSITY PLACEMENT SERVICES
ON CAMPUS RECRUITING SCHEDULE
FOR THE WEEKS OF:
February 8 & February 15, 1988

Scheduling On-Campus Interview Appointments:

The first day of sign-ups for interviews during the period of February 8 through February 15, 1988 will be held on Wednesday, January 27 at 4 p.m. at the Northeast Commons. Education sign-ups will be held in the Forum of the Student Services Building at 6 p.m. All registrants must have a First Choice Interview Card to participate in the first day of sign-ups. After the first day, students and Alumni-ae may sign-up for interviews from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. at the University Placement Services, 360 Student Services Building. A Credential Form must be submitted for each interview scheduled at the time of sign-up.

Cancellation of Interview Appointments:
Cancellation of an interview must be reported in person to the University Placement Services no later than 5 p.m. on the Wednesday (one week) following the corresponding interview Sign-Up Day. Cancellations after this time will be considered a no-show. You are encouraged to carefully consider employers before signing up for interviews.

No Show Policy:

Failure to appear for a scheduled interview or violation of the cancellation policy will result in immediate suspension of your sign-up privileges for the next recruiting period. If you did not honor your scheduled interview, you are required to send a letter of apology to the employer for missing the interview, file a copy of this letter with the University Placement Services, and meet with a placement counselor before scheduling any additional interviews. Any student who "no-shows" twice will be denied interviewing privileges for the remainder of the academic year.

Notice on Citizenship Requirements:

An asterisk (*) following an organizational name denotes specific requirements regarding work status in the United States. Please review these requirements carefully. If no asterisk (*) appears, the organization will interview only candidates with U.S. citizenship or Permanent Visa. Students who do not meet the work status requirements are encouraged to sign-up on the waiting list.

Spotlight Presentations:

Spotlight Presentations offer valuable information about career paths, detailed position responsibilities and organizational philosophy. All students scheduling interviews are strongly encouraged to attend appropriate spotlights. Spotlight Presentations are usually held in the University Placement Services recruiter lounge at 7 p.m. To enter the Student Services Building in the evening, please use the patio entrance.

Additional Placement Services:

There are important services available to you at the University Placement Services. Please note that not all organizations and companies regularly recruit on college campuses. The list below generally reflects the high demand areas in the world of work. Don't become discouraged if your career field is not requested. To assist you in conducting an assertive job search, the University Placement Services provides career and placement counseling, credential services, job search workshops, professional development seminars, career fairs and an alumni Falcon Network. Our excellent Career Resource Library offers you career and employer information and current job vacancies in ALL career fields. Placement Counselors directly refer registered students to employers in their desired career fields. Inquire your access to these services by registering with the University Placement Services in your final year at Bowling Green State University.

RESUME WRITING WORKSHOP:

Often called "the cornerstone of the job search," a good resume is indispensable to the successful job seeker. These workshops will instruct you on preparing the most effective resume and cover letter. The date and time for this workshop is: Tuesday, February 2, from 3:30-5:00 p.m. It will be held in the Community Suite of the University Union.

JOB HUNTING TECHNIQUES WORKSHOP:

"Looking for a job is a job" is a tested and true placement axiom. This workshop will help candidates in organizing effective job hunting campaigns. The areas covered will include: use of University Placement Services, how to identify and contact employers on your own, employment agencies, state employment bureaus, classified advertisements and others. Learn what works and why. The date and time is: Wednesday, February 3 from 3:30-5:00 p.m. It will be held in the Community Suite of the University Union.

INTERVIEWING TECHNIQUES WORKSHOP:

These lectures and discussions will help you sharpen your interviewing skills. The stages, styles, and techniques of successful interviewing will be thoroughly explored. The date and time of this workshop is: Wednesday, February 1, from 3:30-5:00 p.m. and will be held in the Community Suite of the University Union.

CAREER SEARCH '88: Career Fair open to all business students on February 10, 1988, at 1:00 p.m. to 3:30 p.m. in the University Union, Third Floor.
